Wealthy Argentines have large country estates, called "estancias." Some cover an area of 300 square miles. It is not an unusual thing for the owners of these vast estates to have grazing on their pampas 60,000 sheep, 40,000 cattle and 10,000 horses. The spacious homes are furnished with every luxury, and a lavish hospitality of an almost forgotten age is dispensed to those who seek their comfort and shelter. Patagonia, as a part of the territory of Argentina, is fast forging to the front as a civilized state.

Ronoko, Va., has a system of water works which comes near perfection. At the foot of a mountain at the edge of the town a tremendous spring bursts from the ground. There is a great volume of water, clear and cold. A large pump throws this water to a reservoir on top of a hill quite near the city and from thence it is distributed by pipes. The temperature is but little higher than when it comes from the earth. It is soft water, and for cooling it is next to useless. It is abundant, and that is more important than anything else.

GETTING MORE AMMUNITION.

How King Alfonso Views the Future.

Madrid—The American envoy to the royal wedding, Frederick W. Whitridge, and his suite, had an opportunity for a brief conversation with King Alfonso during a reception at the palace. When the conversation naturally turned to the attempt on the king and queen, King Alfonso shrugged his shoulders and made the following significant statement, showing how he views the future: "Yes, unfortunately, it was unsuccessful; but it will come again. It may be any time—perhaps to-morrow, perhaps within a month, perhaps within a year—but it will come." The face of the king wore a look of calm resignation as he gave this forecast of the future. Although he bore himself splendidly throughout the terrible experience, the courtiers witnessed a trying scene as King Alfonso and Queen Victoria hurried within the castle after the attempt was made to assassinate them. For a moment Alfonso's nerves were completely unstrung, and, turning to Queen Victoria, her dress spattered with blood, he exclaimed: "Why did I bring you to this country? It was wrong; you never should have come here." Then the queen mother and one of the infants calmed the overwrought nerves of the king, and the bridal couple repaired sadly to the nuptial chambers.

TROUBLE IN MEXICO

THIRTY-SIX MEXICANS AND SIX AMERICANS KILLED

Hysterical Reports From the Great Copper Mines Gave a Lurid Color to Affairs.

Bisbee, Ariz.—Trouble at the great copper mines at Cananea, state of Sonora, Mexico, between American and Mexican miners, resulted in serious loss of life. The Mexican miners demanded an increase of wages, and the manager of the mines, Col. "Bill" Greene, made a speech, which was not satisfactory, and the Mexicans started rioting. They attacked the American miners, taking them unawares. But more Mexicans died than Americans. When the news was received here, armed men gathered at the border, and were admitted to Mexico by Gov. Ysabel of Sonora. They hurried to the scene of trouble, and with the Mexican rurales (troops) restored order. The ringleaders of the rioters took to the hills. The American consul at Cananea appealed to Washington for assistance, and Washington intimated to the Mexican government to protect the Americans. Hysterical reports by correspondents, and the rush of tenderfeet to get away from the scene of trouble, lent a vivid color to affairs for awhile. The summary shows that during the two days' fighting thirty-six Mexicans were killed and only six Americans. The lumber yard was burned, causing a loss of probably $200,000. A report from Cananea states that eight of the Mexican ringleaders were lined up and shot by the rurales.

ARTHUR P. GORMAN HAS PASSED AWAY

DEATH CAME SUDDENLY AT HIS HOME IN WASHINGTON.

VICTIM OF HEART TROUBLE

From a Poor Boy, as Page in the Senate, He Rose to a Commanding Position in the Politics of Maryland.

Washington, D. C.—Arthur Poe Gorman, United States senator from Maryland, died suddenly at his residence in this city at 9:05 o'clock Monday morning. While Senator Gorman had been ill for many months, he had shown some improvement lately. Heart trouble was the immediate cause of death.

Senator Gorman's illness extended over five months. He had not left his house since January 16. He suffered, in addition to his heart affection, with more or less stomach trouble. A week ago last Saturday he was seized with a heart attack and it was thought then that he could not survive, but he rallied and seemed to get much better.

When the final attack seized him, Monday morning, it was short and sharp, and the senator was dead before the physicians, who were immediately summoned, arrived.

Senator Gorman's Career.

Arthur Poe Gorman was born in Howard county, Maryland, March 11, 1839. So poor were his parents that they did not even own the few acres which they tilled. His education was begun in the country school, and was continued after he became page in the senate by personal reading and study.

For 12 years from the date of his appointment as page in the senate, Gorman was connected in an office holding capacity with that body. In 1866 he was postmaster of the senate, and was removed, and was immediately appointed collector of internal revenue for the Fifth district of Maryland. This office he held for three years, when he was removed by President Grant, going home to Howard county, Maryland, to run for the state legislature. He was elected, and re-elected to the lower and later the upper houses of the Maryland legislature, serving in that body for 21 years.

He allied himself by marriage with Henry Gasaway Davis, the multi-millionaire coal and railroad proprietor of West Virginia, became associated financially with Stephen B. Elkins, son-in-law of Davis, and otherwise built up the politico-financial structure which was his strength.

He built a handsome residence and bought a large tract of land at Laurel, in Howard county, and reared a large family of daughters and one son. He was chosen United States senator, first in 1880 and served until 1899, when an anti-machine revolt in his state sent him home. He bided his time, and four years later returned to the senate.
